ENGINEERS FOR EDUCATION VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Engineers for Education, a private sector effort to improve math and science education in classrooms nationwide, is seeking volunteers. The program is administrated by the National Coalition of Engineering Societies for Precollege Mathematics and Science Education, a group made up of 45 scientific and technical societies including ASME. Volunteers are needed for outreach activities such as classroom demonstrations, career days, science and technology clubs, science fairs and math competitions. Members interested in assisting teachers may arrange field trips, conduct in-service seminars, and substitute while teachers attend professional conferences. Call the coalition at (800) 489-0348 for more information and registration materials.
